Peter Bennett

PRESIDENT'S REMARKS.

We welcomed author Peter Bennett to our meeting today.

RECOGNITION

Phil – Vacation

SPEAKER

Peter regaled us with excerpts from his book, Life Lessons of a Harvard Reject: Tear Down Walls Holding Back Your Success. He was an animated speaker and most of us found at least one of his quotes resonated with us.

One favorite was, "Don't worry about avoiding temptation – when you get old enough, temptation will avoid you." Another was "It's okay to be a little flaky" (a Kellogg story). Another: "You know you're on the right track when people start calling you an idiot."

We were all amused that Dolly Parton, upon competing unannounced in a Dolly Parton look-a-like contest, not only didn't win, she didn't even place.

Some of us were a little squeamish at the description of how the Ford assembly line was created by reverse-engineering the process at a slaughterhouse / meat packing plant.

All of stories in Peter's books lead to a "lesson learned" discussion and they are arranged by topic, so one need not read straight through, but can dip in to find something germane to one's present situation. The book is the result of ten years' research.
